

I would like to complain about the half-time show at yesterday's Super Bowl. As a mother of three, two of whom were watching the show with me, I was completely offended that the performers chose to end the show as they did. My children were disgusted, and I spent the rest of the evening talking with them about the message that the performers sent to the viewers. I know that I will never purchase the performers' products, and I hope in the future that there is some sort of decency clause put in the performers' contracts.